

Weather Art

I like this activity because kids get to practice their creativity skills, by making their own weather painting from scraps and paint.

It's a great fine motor and sensory activity, and they get something that they can be proud of at the end.

What you'll need

- Paint
- Paper

Steps

1. Place white and black paint on a paper plate (or normal plate)
2. Cut out waterdrops and lightning from construction paper and let child stick it on their page
3. Let your child mix the black and white paint on their paper to color their paper grey
4. Let them use blue and yellow paint to add color to the waterdrops and lightning
